"I LOVE YOU"

CHAPTER XIII

THEY spoke of many things—of his work, what they read, what they thought about. The rain came heavily and went away, leaving a persistent, protestant dripping from the eaves. It was much later when Parris said, "Maybe I better go now."

"Wait a little." She kissed his cheek.

"I love you, Cassie."

"No you don't, Parris. But that's all right."

"Listen now, Cassie."

"All right, what?"

"Someday I want you to marry me."

"Oh, Parris, there isn't any answer for that—now."

"But why?"

"Because you don't really want to."

"I mean it! How do you know what I think? I've got to study and be a doctor and it will be a long time."

She smothered the rest of the sentence with her hand.

Parris opened the door and shivered when the drenched night air struck his flushed face.

"Listen, Cassie, I've got to see you."

"Maybe, maybe I can think of a way. But you'd better go now Parris, sure enough. It feels late."

"Listen!" The deep bell of the town clock struck slowly—four times.

"What'll you do?"

"I'm going over to Drake McHugh's. Then I'll say I was with him all night."

"Maybe I love you—I don't know."

THE thinning clouds were turned pink overhead when he knocked at the side door of the Livingstone house.

"Say! Who's out there?" Parris thought Drake sounded just a little frightened.

"It's me, Drake, Parris."

Drake flung the door open, blinking and incredulous. "What are you doing around here this time of night?"

"I've been at Dr. Tower's."

"This late?" Drake was incredulous.

"He's in St. Louis. I went by for my books. Cassie and I started talking—he broke off 'She's beautiful, Drake'."

"Don't I know it!"

"I guess I'm in love with her."

"Maybe so, but you'd still better take off that wet coat. And if Dr. Tower finds out you've fallen for her, even pneumonia won't save you. Come on and get into bed."

Clean Up on Soap Operas

Bess Flynn Makes Plenty Writing for Radio

By ADELAIDE KERR

Wide World Features Writer

Some time ago the boys used to say the girls didn't have creative brains—the kind of brains that make money.

Today let me introduce you to a pair of soap opera queens—both wives, mothers and stars in the radio serial world.

One is Bess Flynn, a smiling gray-haired woman who whips out two five-day serials a week to the tune of more than $50,000 a year. The other is Bess Johnson, a tall, good-looking blonde, whose flexible actress voice brings her $1,800 a week as star of another soap opera.

Mrs. Flynn turns out a weekly stint that would drive most people berserk—15,000 words, 52 weeks a year, divided between the two serials "Bachelor's Children" and "We the Abbotts."

She does it by a system all her own. Every night she reads amissively—best sellers, magazines, newspapers. The minute she gets up in the morning she begins to plot and after breakfast goes straight to her desk. She talks her stories into a dictating machine, a secretary transcribes them and she edits. Between times she runs the household on the five acre place which she and her husband, Charles Flynn, built at Westport, Conn., and mothers three grown children. How does she keep up the pace?

"I just live my life one day at a time," she said. "A threatened breakdown taught me that. When I finish work I don't think 'I haven't an idea in my head for the next day.' I let tomorrow take care of itself when it comes."

The depression pushed Mrs. Flynn into soap opera. She and her husband had been stock company actors who retired to the Chicago suburbs and a printing business after their family arrived. When the depression wiped Mr. Flynn's job away and things looked very black, Mrs. Flynn got the hunch to seek a radio acting job for her gifted ten-year-old son. He got the job and she landed another on the same program for $30 a week. When she grew bored with the serial stories she acted, she wrote some herself and rang the bell.

Bess Johnson's is a hard work story too. She worked in a restaurant and modeled for artists to pay for her course at the American Academy of Dramatic Art in New York. In the next few years she whistled through several seasons in a Chicago stock company, marriage, motherhood of a daughter and divorce.

Then when she sought a radio job

Parris laughed a little. What a wonderful friend Drake McHugh was! He understood you so well.

He thought of Cassie. An image of her floated into his waning consciousness and her presence in his mind flooded his nerves with a faint excitement.

SPRING in Kings Row was never more than a brief, prelude to summer. The leaves unfolded and there was a week or two of balmy warmth, then a sudden onslaught of blistering heat. The idlers who hung about stores in the back quarters of stores came out and took their accustomed places on the courthouse lawn.

On the west porch of the courthouse was another group. This was the upper order. They were wit, jury, and judge of any happenings in the town or county.

"Say, I hear old man Tod Irving down at Little Rock passed on."

A new speaker interrupted. "I guess you ain't heard the news about Mrs. Sims."

"She was operated on by Dr. Gordon last week."

"Is that so? What for?"

"I don't know exactly. Something about her ear, I heard."

"Oh."

"Well, I hear the operation went through all right, but they say half her face is paralyzed."

"Does seem to me, though, this Gordon does a powerful lot of operatin'."

DR. TOWER handed a small German pamphlet to Parris.

"This may interest you. It is new—and important."

Dr. Tower watched Parris keenly.

"I saw your grandmother yesterday."

Parris looked up, somewhat startled.

"Yes, sir?"

"I hope you won't misunderstand my question, but have you any idea what's wrong?"

Parris laid the book down. "No, I haven't really. I believe—well, sir, I just hadn't thought it could be anything serious."

"She doesn't look well."

The peculiar emphasis this time really frightened Parris. "Do you think there is something—"

Dr. Tower interrupted brusquely. "I don't think anything about it. I'm not your grandmother's physician."

Parris flushed darkly.

"Have you any relatives?"

"None at all. Only some very distant ones—that my grandmother doesn't like much."

"H'm. You'll be quite alone when—quite alone some day."

Parris didn't answer. His lips were quivering.

"Did you ever hear of Dr. Ladd in St. Louis?"

"Yes, sir."

"Do you think you could in any way persuade Madame von Elt to go to St. Louis to consult him?"

The color faded slowly from Parris' face, his eyes darkened, and his words came huskily. "I don't know how I could do it. She'd want to know what made me think of it."

"Yes, yes. Doubtless. Is Skeffington her lawyer?"

"Yes, sir."

"Could you talk to him?"

"Maybe. Or could you?"

"No." The reply was curt.

Parris shrank sensitively from the cutting tone. "I guess I'm being kind of awkward this afternoon, sir, but, gee, Dr. Tower, I—I've been scared all this winter. I didn't know why. It was just—just instinctive."

"H'm, yes, I see. I think you're going to be a good doctor, Parris."

"Isn't Dr. Gordon a good doctor?"

Dr. Tower looked steadily at Parris for a moment. "Not a very tactful question, young man, nor a very ethical one for a young doctor-to-be to ask." He smiled, and Parris smiled, too, rather wanly.

"You trust my judgment, do you?"

"Oh, absolutely. I know you know."

Dr. Tower colored a little, a very little. Parris stared.

"I'm curious to know why you think so."

"Well, sir, there are some things you just know."

"Instinct?"

"Yes, sir. I guess so." Parris moved forward in his chair. He forgot the distant formality that usually characterized his talks with Dr. Tower. "You remember that little book of Friedlander's that you had me read last month. He said a lot about unconscious observations and how we sometimes add up a long sum of this kind of observations and come to conclusions that are quite right without knowing how we got them."

"Yes."

"Well," Parris smiled frankly, "it's like that."

Dr. Tower looked grave. "Well, keep your mind open. You're going to see and learn a lot of new things in your life. We're on the brink—the very brink of important discoveries. Sometimes intuitions are a good corrective for the natural astigmatism of human perceptions."

Good stumpage prices for farm timber emphasize the need to "crop" rather than "mine" farm forests, reports Oliver L. Adams, county agent.

Stumpage prices for timber should be good in 1942. The National Defense program including and involving the farm timber acres with their respective forest products, according to Frederick J. Pastor Knocks Out Franklin

Scores Surprising Win Over Negro Heavyweight

CLEVELAND —(AP)— Bob Pastor turned slugger and after exploding the myth of Lem Franklin's famed fistic power, fought on to stop the Cleveland Negro in eight rounds Tuesday night. Pastor weighed 181; Franklin 197 1-4.

After weathering Franklin's punches for three rounds, Pastor gave Lem a boxing lesson for the next few heats and put him away with a blistering barrage at 2 minutes, 8 seconds of the eighth in a fight booked for 10.

Esso Dealers' air gauges have been checked for accuracy can and will help you to make your tires last! He knows that tires 30% under-inflated rob you of one-quarter of your possible mileage. One mile in four! And a recent check showed that nine out of every ten air standards are inaccurate!

So your Esso Dealer has had his air gauge tested and, if necessary, adjusted to give the exact pressure needed. Further, he has a special chart showing the car-maker's tire pressure recommendations for your car. And he'll be glad to give you a ready reference memo card, which shows proper pressures for your tires, both front and back.

Here are other services that lengthen tire mileage:

- SWITCH WHEELS EVERY 3,000-5,000 MILES. If you have no spare, move front tires straight back and shift rear tires to opposite sides in front.
- CHECK WHEEL ALIGNMENT PERIODICALLY. Watch for uneven or spotty wear. Tires out of line literally drag sideways at every revolution.
- REPAIR SMALL CUTS. Even a tiny cut can work right through and ruin a tire. Have tires examined frequently and repaired.
- KEEP WHEELS AND TIRES IN BALANCE. Whenever tire and tube are removed from rim, have wheel balanced again to avoid uneven wear.
- BE SURE TIRES AND TUBES ARE PROPERLY MOUNTED. Use proper tools to prevent damaging the bead or pinching the inner tube.

HOW YOU CAN HELP:

1. Refrain from high speed driving.
2. Accelerate and brake slowly.
3. Avoid scuffing against curbs.
4. Never drive on a flat.
5. Don't get oil or grease on tires.
6. Let your Esso Dealer check tire pressures at least once a week.

Crop Insurance Covers All Loss

Cotton Protection Includes Weevils, Insects

Under the new cotton crop insurance program Hempstead county farmers can insure their 1942 yield against loss from all unavoidable causes, including boll weevils and other insects, flood, drought, wind, hail, plant disease, storm and such other as may be designated by the Federal Crop Insurance Corporation, according to E. N. Martindale, chairman of the County AAA committee.

"Cotton crop insurance is a business-like program," he declared. "It is designed to protect the cotton producer from loss due to unavoidable causes. It does not offer insurance against laziness, however, and will not cover losses due to negligence, improper cultivation and so forth."

In discussing protection offered by crop insurance, Mr. Martindale gave the following answers to other questions most commonly asked by farmers and business men in Hempstead county about the new insurance program:

1. Where can I apply for cotton crop insurance?
Cotton crop insurance policies are being written at the AAA office in the courthouse at Hope.
2. How long a period does crop insurance cover?
Crop insurance must be taken out before the cotton is planted or before March 16. It offers protection until the cotton is weighed in on the gin scales, provided this is not later than January 21, 1943.
3. How much can I insure my crop for?
A producer may insure his cotton crop for 50 per cent or 75 per cent, whichever he wishes, of the seven year average production of his farm, according to the protection he wishes and the size of the premium he prefers to pay. Insurance providing 100 per cent coverage would not be practical, because some producers would take advantage of the Crop Insurance Corporation and neglect their crop in order to collect an indemnity. With producer carrying the first 25 per cent risk there is still a big incentive for producers to make a full crop.
4. How are premiums calculated and how can they be paid?
Just as yields are based on the average historical or appraised production of the producer's farm for past years, the premium is based on the farm's average historical or appraised crop loss.

More Machines Are Confiscated

Police Renew Warning to Get Rid of Slot Machines

County and local police announced Wednesday that several more slot machines were seized and confiscated here Tuesday night and renewed warnings that "they will not be permitted to operate in Hempstead county."

Previously several machines were confiscated in the Patmos area by county police.

After the Patmos raid police noted that slot machines began to disappear in Hope.

Fortune From Stamps
The sale of two very rare stamps from British Guiana, dated 1850, preserved among her grandfather's papers, brought an elderly German woman a small fortune a few years ago.
